KINGFISHERS... AN ENVIRONMENTAL CONCERN

« This wall was a bit technical but allowed us to create several pieces. In the upper right part, the kingfisher couple are conversing. In the lower part, the bird is fishing. Our mural represents the fusion of two beings, two art styles; illustrative and geometric. »

THE GARGOYLE

« I wanted to paint a Breton gargoyle breaking out of its stone shell in a flurry of life, colours and magical effects. It is a distorted metaphor aiming to tell a personal story. »

BRETON WOMAN

« I like to think about traditions, history, erasure and appearance when I am painting a mural. I take great pleasure on giving a destructured aspect to my works. The acrylic paint allows me to give a painting aspect to my murals, like a painting on a canvas. What's important is to live a heartfelt life full of memories... »

JUST DO PAINT

« I'm inspired by urban life and the street art community. I've added natural elements to my work like flowers and octopus tentacles. I chose black and white paints with a dash of colour for the colour palette. I like when there is movement within a painting. »

ART IN MIND

« I observed life on this square and decided to create a stencil with a meaningful and strong expression. I turned it around to double it and produce a mirror effect. »

CHERISH

« My painting relates the story of a woman overlooking the city of Saint-Brieuc. She is a sort of mother earth. The halo around her head symbolises the world. She is hugging it to show her affection to all human beings and animals. She is trying to protect them. Her eye is half blue, half brown to show we are all united. The bird on her arm symbolises freedom. »

THE BIG LITTLE MERMAID

« You can see how much the little mermaid has grown! I have depicted her with warm colours, a sunset... This mermaid symbolises the sea, our dear Brittany and its legends. »

THE 3 BROTHERS

« From the magical sea to the swamps at place de la Grille, the three Le Goff brothers have left their marks on the city of Saint-Brieuc. They died for their country and their sacrifice inspired me. This mural is a colourful tribute to them and a time travel. »

MAN, TRADITIONS AND NATURE

« Surprising the public is what I like about painting in a public space. I came here to tell a story full of love, culture, faith and mysticism. »

MY SAINT-BRIEUC

« I wanted to picture some memorable times from my teenage years in Saint-Brieuc:

- 1990: When I saw the headline-making rap band Public Enemy at the Art Rock festival.

- 1997: A temporary housing solution in a sleeping car at the Légué harbour will become a hot spot of the French punk movement. »

DARKNESS ONLY HARMS THE ONE SPREADING IT

« I was inspired by the Breton legend of the king who is hunting a white doe which surprises him by shooting an arrow back at him. To me that symbolises that you reap what you sow. I thought this former entrance to the city could be an invitation to introspection. It is a slow but essential travel through life and the city from which everyone comes out alive but hurt and all the more aware. »

FORCE OF NATURE

« It is a fight of man against nature. This "force of nature" samurai is a warrior ready to die in battle. He is covered in patterns inspired by nature. This mural forces the comparison between men, confident in their strength and the true strength of the elements. The water, the wind, the moon, the mountains and the waves are elements under human attack but which might end up victorious at the end of this fight. »

THE CHAMELEON

« I painted the « Rooster » in Saint-Brieuc the first time I came to Brittany. This time I chose to paint another colourful animal in my own style to liven up the place with good vibes. I aim to bring you joy with flashy colours when you set your eyes on it. I would like to come back someday, so I hope to see you again soon... »

SEEK AND FIND

« I wanted to stick a maximum of stencils throughout the city to try and "be a part of" its history for a while; bringing to it a little bit of poetry. These twenty something stencils placed in the city centre make for a fun artistic treasure hunt. These stencils can be classified into two themes: «Angels» or «Fragility and ephemeral »
